The dry chemical agent fire suppression system in the cafeteria kitchen is past the end of its useful life. A recent review by the regulating authority having jurisdiction expressed concern with the system and described the system as unlikely to pass inspection at the next review and inspection period. The system is above the cooking stoves and ovens used to prepare meals for the students. The system is believed to be part of the original construction of the building in 1963. The estimated cost as developed by a consulting construction management firm is $15,000 to $20,000.

Project Category: Special Systems

Are any of the above-described issues in buildings or part of buildings that are leased to another entity, including a district sponsored charter school? N
